A perceptive study of a brilliant, gay Western writer

“A significant and welcome contribution to scholarship on western American literature, Montana literature, and environmental literature.”
—Michael P. Branch, author of Rants from the Hill

“The first book-length study to explore Savage’s work in light of his conflicted sexuality—and thus an important contribution to American gay and lesbian literary studies—it sets the standard for future studies of Savage’s West.”
—David Peterson, associate professor of English, University of Nebraska at Omaha

Savage West: The Life and Fiction of Thomas Savage
O. Alan Weltzien

An exploration of ranch and small-town life in California’s San Joaquin Valley

“A magnificent book about the American West and a multigenerational family’s ties to its ancestral homeland and to the daunting land of the San Joaquin Valley.”
—Meghan Daum, author of The Problem with Everything

“In elegant prose, Frank Bergon has conjured a complex portrait of the San Joaquin Valley of California during the mid-1950s and beyond...”
—Roxanne Dunbar-Ortiz, author of Red Dirt: Growing Up Okie

The Toughest Kid We Knew: The Old New West (A Personal History)
Frank Bergon

Biography of literary pioneer Willa Cather

“I cannot think of any Cather volume quite like this one.”
—Timothy W. Bintrim, Professor of English, Saint Francis University

“A masterpiece of meticulous scholarship, exhaustive research, insightful analysis... Becoming Willa Cather: Creation and Career is extraordinary and unreservedly recommended.”
—Midwest Book Review

In walking alongside the underrepresented voices in American literature, Peregrinations invites us to read the many footprints storying the American landscape.

—Western American Literature

Hamilton deconstructs the notion that walking is merely ‘a masculine tradition of conquest and domination of the American land,’ by spotlighting several examples of Native American and Southwest border literatures that use walking as a means to interrogate place and identity.

—KCET

An extensive study of the literary and cultural left in the West

“Adds to the already well-established scholarship on leftist politics in twentieth-century America.”

—Great Plains Quarterly

“Offers a timely overview of the cultural production that emerged out of progressive social movements from the late 19th to the early 21st century. Weaving together social and literary history with biographies and theory about the cultural Left in the American West, the contributors create a complicated and diverse portrait of politically-engaged critical work.”

—Susan Kollin, Montana State University

A careful analysis of how California’s mythos and social history were molded by its literature

“A valuable study for those interested in the environmental history of California, the development of the social novel, the agrarian roots of American national identity, or the tradition of American literary ecology.”

—Studies in American Naturalism

“Offering in-depth readings of four California social novels that address conflicts over space and power, the book is an original way to understand social protest and cultural upheaval during a time of rapid change in California.”

—Jan Goggans, University of California, Merced

Examines how one author and musician’s work reflects much larger social concerns in the West

“If good criticism serves to elevate a reader’s appreciation of the subject at hand, then Under the Western Sky certainly succeeds, underscoring Vlautin’s position as an important voice in postwestern American literature.”

—Western American Literature

“Under the Western Sky makes a strong case for Vlautin as a resonant voice in a new kind of West a considerable distance from earlier regional mythologies.”

—O. Alan Weltzien, University of Montana Western

The Desert Between Us: A Novel
Phyllis Barber

An engaging novel set against the historic backdrop of Westward expansion

“A historical love story about the American West and the need for human connections... Most appealing for the scenery it captures, the book devotes paragraphs to the magnificence of the Nevada countryside. It captures big skies and scorching deserts as its characters wage an unwinnable struggle against nature.”
—Foreword Reviews

“Barber’s exquisite prose captures the beauty and the grandeur of the arid red rock country.”
—Michele Morris, author of The Cowboy Life

Acceleration Hours: Stories
Jesse Goolsby

Raw and piercing stories spotlight the voices of America’s forever wars

“A live-wire collection full of characters who aren’t afraid to bare their souls.”
—Sara Nović, author of Girl at War

“Acceleration Hours should haunt a nation that has for a generation now sent the least among us around the globe to dominate and humiliate the least among Them—all in service of an empire estranged from its ideals. This collection should wake us up; it has the power to change us.”
—Dan O’Brien, author of War Reporter and The Body of an American

The Brightest Place in the World: A Novel
David Philip Mullins

A deadly explosion at a Las Vegas chemical plant forces an afflicted cast of characters to reevaluate their lives

“This book is a love letter to Las Vegas, the western desert, and, most of all, the mysteries of the human heart.”
—Charles Bock, New York Times bestselling author of Beautiful Children and Alice & Oliver

“There’s no place like Las Vegas, a town full of both heartache and love—comes alive.”
—Edan Lepucki, New York Times bestselling author of California and Woman No. 17

Ruminations on the practical and existential challenges of living an environmentally aware life
2018 Reading the West Book Award Nonfiction Winner

“This heartfelt, intelligent, and continuously deepening book is a model of reflective environmental practice, full of insight, wisdom, struggle, and hope.”
—Western American Literature

A profound eco-memoir that ponders all aspects of life

“Roberts expertly crafts a narrative both of the places she’s traveled and the events that have shaped her own emotional terrain.”
—Library Journal

“There is a certain beauty and elegance in Roberts’s words and the rhythm and cadence of her writing. All the while, her text exudes a deep love and respect for the world around her. Simply put, Here Is Where I Walk is a breath of fresh air.”
—Foreword Reviews

A powerful portrayal of the complexities of the American West in the twenty-first century

“The West, with its iconic landscapes, has long served as a scenic backdrop—for photos, paintings, movies, myths and dreams. Bergon’s essays turn the focus on the West’s people, and on California’s enduring appeal for newcomers.”
—High Country News

“This generous-hearted book, without a whiff of cynicism, is, ultimately, a clear and quietly crafted meditation on how much has been lost of the Old West...”
—Los Angeles Review of Books

Exploring the science and philosophy of cosmological landscapes

“This is an unusual book in the distinctive genre of popular science.”
—Choice

“The writing is personal, thoughtful, and emotional, but it is also clear that Lago conducted extensive research on the topics, whether through books and primary sources or simply his own experiences.”
—The Journal of Arizona History

Memorials Matter: Emotion, Environment, and Public Memory at American Historical Sites

Jennifer K. Ladino

A thought-provoking analysis of place, public memory, and trauma

“Memorials Matter offers a timely and thoughtful examination of the ways in which the built and natural environment shape collective memories and national identity... a book commendably and unabashedly of this time.”
—Western Historical Quarterly

“As threats to the U.S. national park system continue to proliferate alongside resurgent white nationalisms, Memorials Matter proves a timely and necessary work.”
—Nicole Seymour, author of Strange Natures

Memorials Matter: Emotion, Environment and Public Memory at American Historical Sites
Jennifer K. Ladino

One man’s lifelong encounter with the iconic granite peaks of Yosemite

“By situating his personal inquiry into human meaning on a substance—intrusive granite—that resists storytelling, Cohen takes a hard route to grace. A perfect book for mountain people who distrust easy answers to existential questions.”
—Jared Farmer, author of Trees in Paradise: A California History
